

HOW'S THE MARKET? | March 2019

Reports of a housing market collapse are premature, as sales activity is resurging after a slower winter. More homes are coming on the market and going under contract, in less time and at higher prices. Lower interest rates could be a positive factor in sales activity over the next several months.

